

THE BASKET WORM.

A New and Dangerous Enemy to the Hedges and Evergreens Everywhere.

Mr. S. D. Ball of Springfield, Union County, New Jersey, entered THE SUN office on Saturday morning, carrying a vase in one hand and a tin box in the other. He had a puzzled air when he laid the box on the end of a desk, and, raising the lid, showed that it was three-fourths full of brownish worms wriggling half way in and out of their brown cocoon, like that of a silkworm.

"Now," Mr. Ball said, "admitting his greenrimmed glasses, "I have here a gentleman who has come to inform me as to the nature of these creatures? I have about three quarts of them home, that I picked off my hedges and trees. My neighbor told me they were armyworms, so I thought they might be army worms. On Thursday afternoon, I think it was, I noticed that the tops of the hedges in front of the house were being devoured, and, looking beyond, saw a worm of a sportsman as well known as Mr. Warner Kinsey himself, who came up from the south on his way through with him the two wings, both of which are stamped as described."

A Sure Mosquito Killer.

From "Homer's Paper."

The Periphereum, or "Persian chameleon," is the powdered name of a harmless growing worm, which, when it has reached its full size, it has been seen to kill the natives of welcome guests from the insect world. It is a native of Persia, and is sold without knowing the trade, 12¢ Green St., New York. Price, 25¢ per pound.
